

Jen Berger

KITCHEN DESIGNER

Jen discovered the joy of design in high school and went on to earn her degree in architecture at Wentworth Institute of Technology. Over the course of two decades working in Maine as a drafter and estimator, she spent time with builders and clients creating beautiful homes.

Jen took time away from her career to homeschool her children and was able to return after her youngest reached high school. Jen loves how kitchen design gives her the ability to blend both her creative side and engineering mind in pursuit of elegant, yet functional spaces. She loves working with both builders and homeowners to explore different styles and colors, while paying attention to the details. When not at work, Jen loves to go for walks, spend time with family, and visit Boston whenever she can.

“From drafting homes to designing the heart of the home, I love helping people create a special place that brings family + friends together, and brings them joy.”
